Program Changes

Although every tour is carefully planned, unforeseen circumstances may require changes to the itinerary. These may include weather conditions, changes in local regulations, political decisions, access restrictions, or participants' health and safety needs.

Whenever possible, TAF Travel will adapt the itinerary while preserving the main character of the trip. If the original program cannot reasonably be carried out, we will make every effort to arrange a suitable alternative of comparable quality, subject to local conditions and availability.

Possible itinerary changes

Mountain and travel programs depend on conditions that cannot be fixed in advance. The guide or TAF Travel may change the order of days, camps, overnight stays or the route, or cancel parts of the program, for these reasons:

- Weather, snow, wind or avalanche conditions
- Safety assessment by the guide on the day
- Health and acclimatization of participants
- Permits, national park, border or government regulations
- Road access, transport, flight schedules and local conditions
- Unforeseeable events beyond TAF Travel's control

The confirmed program and the guide's instructions apply. Saved expenses are reimbursed when parts of the program are cancelled for safety reasons.
